Years Mentoring

My name is Advaith Vadlakonda and I run an academic mentorship practice called Vvisdom. A Birmingham native who grew up in Hoover and went to Spain Park, I started tutoring in high school and never stopped. Now a Boston College graduate (B.S. Biology '24, M.S. Quantitative Finance '25), I'm nationally ranked in the Top 20 on Varsity Tutors with a perfect 5.0 rating.

My experience spans working with 200+ students over the past 10 years across both private sessions and classroom settings. I specialize in SAT/ACT prep, essay writing, and math through AP Calculus, and now work with families and schools across the country.

Every single student achieved their goals. My long-term students have gone on to attend UVA, Duke, Vanderbilt, UPenn, Georgia Tech, UCLA, UT Austin, and more.

What sets Vvisdom apart is the depth of personalized attention that gets crowded out in a classroom. Students come in with one goal and leave with a stronger sense of who they are and where they want to go — their strengths, their interests, what they actually want to pursue. One student discovered a natural talent for music production mid-session, just from a conversation that happened organically. That kind of discovery matters.

This is a premium service that's priced to be far more accessible than the institutional alternatives that deliver far less for far more.

I'm accepting a few new students this summer. You can join Vvisdom's waitlist at this link:
